Dear Governor

On Saturday last in the morning it commenced raining and until this time we have had more or less rain daily, this Thursday being the 6th day.

The wind is now northwest and tomorrow I hope it will clear – The natural consequence of this state of things is no news, no mail and very little of any thing interesting Mr Tyrony the Sac & Fox Agent has been here, upon a writ from Judge Elmore and waited here for him about one day with him were the two Randalls and I believe one of the other parties against whom there had been a writ issued The Marshalls Robbins & Walker came with the prisoners, and remained one day or there abouts and then left the prisoners without a bailiff or any charge whatever to avoid paying their expenses Judge Elmore was at home with his sick family, the Marshalls having both left Mr Tyrony inflicted his presence upon me for a couple of hours in the morning, which I bore with patience and Christian fortitude, hearing all he had to say and receiving from him his statement, which I promised to copy and forward to the department

As usual he thought the Governor was Judge & Jury and expected more from his hands than he could receive
