Corbin (he covering the man who stayed back.)

Take for example X_4 receiving quick pass from X_5 & dribbling in. f_1 would very often leave X_1 & go after X_4. Then X_4 would pass to X_1 who would start in. g_4 would go after X_1 & g_5 approach X_3.

You can see why we did break thru for easy shots when things went near right.

We also used 2 men in corners & their guards changed men when our forwards crossed from one side to the other. Their guards will not follow your men out very far.

Their defense may change some but I know "Nibs" doesn't like man for man def for his team.

Cal hasn't played any games yet so I did not get a chance to look them over.

I hope this will be of assistance to you as I appreciate the help I have already gotten at your hands. I am looking forward, with pleasure, to see you again.

Sincerely

E. P. Hunt
