paving. I let him go quick so as to save a fall and the point of his shoe fell square on the top of my foot. It stung for awhile but my foot was so cold that I didn't feel it after a minute or two. This was about 8:30. We didn't ride because it was too bitter cold, but worked around the barracks. During the first period in the afternoon we had heliograph practice. The instrument was set up to catch the sun coming in the window so we could read it inside the barracks. Well my feet started to thaw out and my left one felt pretty
