it hit the road. In about five minutes the roads were covered with a thin coat of ice. Our horses are all smooth shod as they fight and kick each other in the corral. The roads here, are just up one hill and down another and our horses soon had trouble keeping on their feet with that thin, hard glaze of ice. Betty soon when we were walking down a rather steep hill, both of Jen's hindfeet slipped forward and he sat down pretty neatly. In a few minutes Collins did the same stunt and his horse
