Mr. William A. Andrews

Dear William:

The tickets for the Oklahoma game have all been sold out since February 9. However, I am turning your money over to Mr. Earl Falkenstein, the financial secretary of the Athletic Association.

Standing room is the only thing that is left and tickets are seventy-five cents each. However, I am sure if you will get some old folding camp stool that you will find some place in the auditorium that would give you a good view of the ball game. We can not promise you any space, though. This is only a suggestion from a basketball coach to a basketball fan.

There are no reserved seats left. All of them have been sold since the middle of February. I would suggest that you write Mr. Falkenstein as to whether or not you want your money returned, or whether you want to take a chance on seeing this ball game from the vantage point that I have described.

Regretting the fact that we have no good seats left, and thanking you for your letter and remittance, I am,

Sincerely yours,
