Dear Ray:

This will acknowledge receipt of your kind favor of the 13th instant, asking for four tickets for the Oklahoma-Kansas Basketball Game on March 7.

Doubtless you have read in the paper that the day before the Nebraska Game the tickets were sold out for the Oklahoma Game. However, I am referring your request to Mr. Earl Falkenstien, who is magician at finding someone who cannot attend the game. I will bet you two to one that he will not disappoint you, but I do not understand how he does it.

Thank you very much for your words of congratulation. I feel as if I am in a trance when I look at our standing in the Conference. I do not know how the boys do it, but they just refuse to stay down. The opponents step on them, flatten them out, but by some peculiar method they rejuvenate to the point that they stagger through to victory. However, if we never win another game, I will be convinced that they have done more than I ever expected them to do.

With all good wishes and assuring you that Earl somehow will take care of you and that you are in good hands, I am,

Sincerely yours,

Director of Physical Education and Recreation
Varsity Basketball Coach
