We (1st + 3rd) had a truck to take us out in the field and the clay was fierce. One hill stalled us and we got out and got behind.

Well we set up our station by the Engineers' trenches — the big tent and all.

It sure was an awful morning and I thought my fingers would freeze while we were putting up the antenna.

Everything went like clockwork and in record time. When we came in at noon we had the thick yellow clay up to our knees. I had to scrub my shoes, leggins and raincoat and shelter tent.
