And I believe it hurts you, too, in a way. You will remember that I told you that if I were not very sure you would be glad to forget me in a few years, that I would not write another letter. I still say the same. For awhile last year I had hopes of your being "my little girl" some day but I no longer can hope that even if I were free to come back home now. There is no "little message" between the lines of my letters to you — except that I love you to the utmost. However, it is all useless
