strong, my dear Shields — if I suffer at times from nervosity, it is also possible for painters to take a morbid view of the question. I am quite certain that I have, as an artist should, made solid progress in the merit of my work, such as it is, and this chiefly within the last 5 years, during which I have supplied by application some serious qualities which had always been deficient in my practise, & provided,