and a paire of white starchy gloves upon her Her person hands. For her person she was tall of stature, of body corpulent, round shouldred, her face as it were fatt and broad double chinn, with greeke eyes, longe fingers and slender feete, her Queene thus apparelled as yt is aforesaid, in a kinde of fray without any ruffe or disorderinge in a kinde of mattrose or tymes dropped her Chamber, and poore willinglie bended her steppes towards the hall, wch was the place of iudgment, bemoe gentlie ledd and supported out of her Chamber into an entrie upon the said greate hall, by two of Sr Amias Paulets gentlemen, Mr Andrewes the Eight Reverend Bishop goeinge before her. In the entrie the Earle of Kent and the Earle of Shrewsbury appointed Commissioners by her Matie for her said iudgment together with her two Governors of her person Sr Amias Paulet and Sr Drue Drury and divers ffr and gentlemen of good account both for weare they found on of the said Queenes Melvine servants named Melvine weepinge exceedinge and sobbinge of teares utteringe these words (ah Madam)

(ah Madam) vnexpected me, what man was ever before the messinger of sorrowe and greevinge as I shalbe when I shall report that my good and gracious Queene and Mr^is was beheaded in Englande? Her teares prevented him of further speeche Whereupon the said Queene powringe forth her dyeinge teares, thus answered. Cease Lord of Scotts to lament for thy cause rather to reioyce then to mourne, for now shalt thou see Marie Stuarte troubles receive their longe desired end and determination.
For know said she (good servant) all the world is but vanitie, and subiect still to more sorrowe then a weake Ostrich of teares, can bewaile. But I pray thee said she report this from me, that I dye true woman to my religion, true Scottish and true Frenche, but God forgive them said she, that have longe desired my end, and thirsted for my blood, as the hart dothe for the water brookes; O God said shee thou that art the author of truth and truth itselfe, thou knowest the inward Chamber of my thoughts and how that I was ever willinge that Englande and Scotland might
