a man bredd in England, hath not Experi= =ence abroad, but Raleigh a man of witt millitaria and a sound man, Now if these things were bredd in a Collaro tree, I weare that to them to speake of which can speake farr better of them then my selfe, and so sett him downe again.

The Kings Attorney Generall Coke

I must first (my Lords) before I come to the cause, give one caution, because we shall often mention upon of counsell plac ed of them great Monarches, that whatsoe ever is said of them we shall but repeate w^t which others have said of them, I mean the capitall offenders in their confessi= =ons, not professing the lawe must speake reverently of Kings and Potentates, And I praise these noble Lords, and the rest of this great Assemblie, are come to heare what hath beene scattered upon the Bark of report you carrie wise minddes to rend mine not mine but upon plaine Evidence. Here is misprision in summe gradu, exorbitant exorbitant misprision. My speech shall briefly touch those 3. points Imitacon, Supportacon and Desire, The imitation of evill ex= =ceeds the President, as on the contrary Imitation of good ex=ceed as short, misprision cannot bee supported but by misprision, yea it will see multiplie, that it will bring all to confusion. Misprision is always underpropped by falshood and foule error= =tions and because all those did centur in this Treason you shall understand the manner as before you did. The Bye the Treason of the Bye consisted of these points, first that the Lord Cobham, Brooke Marchum and the rest by force in the night intended to surprise the Court, which was a rebellion in the heart of the Realme, yea in the heart of the hurt of the Soverte, They intended to take him that is a Sovereigne to make him subject to their power purposing to open the doores with mushetts and Daggers, and to take also the Prince and the Counsell and then under the Kings Authoritie to carry the King to the Tower, to make a state of the Lord Admyrall, and when they had the King there to extract 3. things from him, first a pardon