and this is holden more probable than either of the other two. That is when a man by his ~~[illegible]~~ Transgression of another, shall (by the same transgression) also condemne himselfe. and make himselfe liable to the same fault and punishment. This is more strong than manie witnesses. Then hee came to make a definition of Treason, Treason in y^e heart, Treason in the mouth, Treason in the hand and Treason in the Consumacon, comparing y^e in Corde to the roote of a tree, In ore to y^e Budd, in manu to the Blossome, and that wch is Consumacone to the fruite. Now I come to Enforce you of the furie. The greatness of Treason is to bee considered by these two things Determinacons finis et Electione Judicii. And this Treason exceeds in both for the 4 first that was to destroy the King and his Progenie. other Treasons are found to bee Crimen Lese Mat^is. This goes further and may bee termed Crimen et Extirpatio Regie Mat^is et totius Progenij. I shall not mood my lords to speake unto thinge of the King, nor of the Counte and Sweet mod of his nature whose thoughte are innocent, whose words full of wisdome and learning, and whose worke full of honor. although it bee a true but to whome do you beare your malice to the children?

To whome speake you all this? you tell Raw: mee of mowes I mow heard of.

Sr I will prove you to bee the Attor:
most notorious Traytor that ever raned at a Barr.

Your words raned condemne mee (mr Raw: Attor) my innocence is my defence, prove one of these things wherewith you have charged mee and I will confesse the whole findictment, and that I am the foulest Traytor that ever lived, and worthie to bee crucified with a thousand deaths.

Nay I will prove all, thou art a Mon- Attor: =ster, thou hast an English face but a Spanish heart, now you must have money Aremberge was not sparer in Gray land etc.
I charge thee Rawleigh that thou imbrace Cobham to get into him and to deale with him to bestowe 600000. Dyvolved on distem-tered ybend to raise rebellion in the Kingdome.

Let mee Answer for my selfe. Raw:

Sr you shall not. Attor.

It concerned my life. Raw:
