Methinks you fall out w^th y^r selfe I say nothing/.

Attor: You would perswade mee by this booke that hee is not the lawfull King, mee lett to consider some circumstance (my Lords) you know my Lord Cobham for whome wee all lament and mourne, lament in that his honour, which hath stood so long unspotted is now ungrounded, mourne, in that his treasons are cleare, hee is neither pollitique nor sweard man, Raleigh wee both and trusted in the cause with him, and therefore the cause of his destruction, another circumstance is, the forrett contributing of it Humfrey Stafford claymed Sanctuarie for treason, Raleigh in his Marcistillian pollitie hath made a Sanctuarie for treason, hee must talke with none but Cobham because one witnes cannot condemne, for Brooke spoke unto Sr. Griffin Markham, takehood how you dar make my Lord Cobham arraigned, for what? and hee knoweth, Raleigh the traitor will gett it forth of him/ Morton or Lord or Rawleigh wee desired of no part of treason concerning the Lord Cobham hee uttered this unto him/ I have beene desired about you but refuse nothing, further you sent unto him unto him by your trusty servant Kemish that one witnes could not condemne, and therefore bid his Repp. bee of good cheare cause this out of Cobhams Conscie. nce, but out of Rawleighs Marcistillian and diabolish pollitie, yea but Cobham did relent it, why dee you urge it more? See the most horrible practise that ever came out of the bottomlee pitt of Hell/ After that Rawleigh had intelligence that Cobham had accused him, hee endeavoured to have intelligence from Cobham which hee had gotten by young Sr. John Hayton, but I think it were the Error of his youth/.

The Lords Tolde it mee ere I had not beene sent to the Tower/.

Thus Cobham by instigation of Rawleigh entred into those Treason, so that the question wilbe whether you are not the principall Traytor and that Cobham now olde would have entred into it, why did Cobham retract it any more, first because Rawleigh was so odious that hee thought hee should favor the worse for his sake, secondly hee thought thus with himselfe, if hee bee freed I shall cleare my selfe the better/ After this Cobham asked for a
