had bouforound with Aremberge, I suspected his visiting of him for after hee departed from mee at Burgam howse, I sawe him passe his owne Howse, and rode on to St Mary-outre, I know that Lawrency a Marsyout and a follower of Aremberge lay that way, and therefore likely to goe into him, my Lord Cecill asked my opinion of Lawrency, I said if you doe not apprehend Lawrency it is dangerous hee will fly; and if you doe apprehend him, you shall give to my Lord Cobham knowledge. Then I was likewise asked, who was the greatest man with my Lord Cobham, I answered I knew none sber great with him as yonge Wiat of Kent as soone as Cobham saw my face to have disowned his dealing with Aremberge, in his fury hee ouersaw mee, and before hee came to the staire foote, hee repented him and said hee had done mee wrong when hee came to thinke of his Narration, that if hee brought the money to forbes, hee feared that I would deliver him and the money to the Kingt, wd. Attorney, you said this now came out of Cobhams Prisoner hee is a single man. I, hee be single:
mee hee

not hee hath a disposition of his owne hee will not be easily bee guided by others but that if hee hath once tooke a hoard in a matter, hee is not so easily drawne from it, hee is mee baby, but is it not strange with mee to devise with Cobham to goe into Spaine to provoke the King to disburse for mee money, shee being a man of mee lore in England, and I having resigned my place of chiefest bow= ende, the Wardenship of the Stanneries, Is it not strange for mee to make my self Robinhood, Kitt, or Cade, I knowing Eng. to bee in better Estate to defend it self then ever it was, I know Scotland subdued which before was feared, Ireland quiet wherein late o. Forces were dispersed, Denmarke assured, which before was suspected, I know that having a Lady whence true hath surprised mee hee hee an Active King and a lawfull Successor, who would himselfe bee present in all his affaires, the Estate of Spaine were not unknowne to mee I had written my discourse wt I intended to present into the King against peace with Spaine, I knew the Spaniards had six repulses twice in Flaeland 3. at Sea, once in 88: and at Cadiz, I knew
