some of money, to assist a forrain Army for the surprising of his Ma.ties.

Attor: If it is not possible it was out of passion, for it was in talke before three men being specially provided agreed in the sum of money, to bee bestowed on disontented persons, that Gray should have 12000. Crowns, and Rawleigh should have 8. or 10: thousand Crowns.

Then was read Laurencyes Examynation.

Lauren: Exam. Within three dayes Aremberge arrived Cobham reported unto him, and that night Cobham went to Aremberge with Laurency, Rawleigh supped with him.

Attor: Rawleigh must send his part of the money therefore now hee is a Traytor & Crowns shall not stand one yeare of the head of the King my Ld. if a Traytor may not be rewarded by his ministers for if A tell B. and B. tell C. and C. tell D. etc. wee shall now prove Treason without two witnesses.

Rawleighs Examynation.

Raw: Exam. Hee confesseth that Cobham offered him 8000. Crowns which hee would have for the furtherance of the peace betweene England and Spaine, and that hee should have it within foure dayes to which hee saith hee gave this Answer when I see the money I will tell you more, for I thought it had beene one of his ordinarie idle Townsmen, and therefore made mee a Scrumpt Scroll.

Mr. Attorney hath made a long Narr-ation of Copley and the Priests that rounde mee nothing, neither know I how Cobham were altered for hee tolde mee if I would agree to further the peace, he would gett mee 8000. Crowns I asked him who should have the rest of the money, hee Answered I will offer such a noble man some of the money which was not then named, I said hee will not bee perswaded by you but wee extremely sate up for fear a meeting, lest mee bee sworne to death with hott Irons if I did I knew there was anie intention to bestow the money, upon disontented persons, I had made a Discourse against the peace and would have printed it if Cobham had not changed his minde, if the Priests, if Brooke had anie such Intention what is that to mee, they must Answer for it, hee offered one the money, before Aremberge came and that is difference of time.

Rawleigh confesseth the matter and Sericant aboydeth it by distinguishing of time, you Phillipps. say it was offered you before the coming of Aremberge
