insufficient to recompence him for the same for it is his own act and follies to take such estate subt to the Ordnce doct Stu: li: 2: c: 4:

Warrantie collateall

A man seised of lands in fee gate issue two sonnes, the elder brother goeth beyond the sea and remayneth there untill it be tonnoulie reported that he is dead, the father dyeth, the younger brother entreth into his lands as his heire, and aliendth with warrantie, and dyeth without issue of his body, leavinge no lond to distend to his next heire, and afterwards the elder brother returneth, and claymeth the land in his own right, yet is he barred by law and constitution, for that it is the act of his Ancestor, wherof heire he is, by whom as he might have had advantage to have had his land by distent from him as his heire of the had had any so it seemeth reasonable that for the privitie of blood he sustaine disadvantage by him, because bote the elder and the younger were ignorant of the elder brotherhide and right by reason of his owne absence Do: Stu: l: 2: c: 49 Litt: sect 704. 705. 707. But if such heire were vouched by force of such warrantie, he maie enter into the warrantie as one that gete might by distent from that Ancestor, and so avoyd the warrantie

Now that we have the seaves wherein subx is liable but were not it will not pt downe the Judges and officers of the honble Court wth their priviledge offices and then will unfolde the ordinarie proceedings therein.

The Judges and Officers of the honble Court of Chancerie.

The Judges of this Court are the Lord Chancellor of England, or Lord Keeper, Assistants, the Mr of the Rolls and Mrs of the Chancerie, wch are tonnoulie doctors of the Civill lawe

Officers of this Court are the six Clarkes of the Chancerie, the Clarke of the Crowne penall, the Register, the Controlor of the seale, two examiners, the Clarke of the Hanaper, the three Clarkes of the petie bagg, the Crystie, the Serjeant of the Mace.

The Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper keepe the greate seale, and gate it ranniede wth him wherosoever he goeth.

The Mr of the Rolls is the Keeper of the Records Judgments and Sentences given in the Court of Chancerie

The Masters of the Chancerie are Assistants to the Court, to shew what is the equitie of the civile lawe, and what is constitute

The Clarke of the Crowne is the speiall Cnandian of all the matters of the Crowne what are Crowne matters and pleas of the Crowne

The six Clarkes are the Attorneys, as well for the pte as Defdt in every suite in this Court