And yet they upon pawse had not the great the Kings Bente had Imposition over the Staple, specially they would never have transmitted them there, and they would not give them power of their owne accord.

And he said that it was granted that the Kings Bente had Imposition in three things, 1: in treason, 2: in felonie, 3: in matter that concerneth the broade, of the realm.

Justice Crooke spoke much to the same effect wth the rest, and he observed, that for any legall precedente in Parliament, other Courts could not adjudicate the same, but the offence layd in the Informacon was illicite &c.

And the Regall Court wth one Consent did over rule the plea to the Imposition.
