This evening set 50 traps as extension of moraine set and at base of cliffs to weasel Point. at 11:30 P.M. this evening with night cloudy and rainy and dark, a short-billed gull worked the beaches at camp. This adult gull is probably the parent of young first noted at S end of Lake Schrader. Few semipalmated plovers in Caribou trampled areas and drier parts of the alluvium 600 feet S camp. The Baird sandpipers (?) have not been seen on shores since yesterday. This evening at 11:00 P.M. had interesting experience with a wolf at Weasel Point 2000 feet S camp. As I was going to inspect weasel trap at Weasel Point I saw a light object standing on this side of creek 400 feet away. It looked to me like a barren ground grizzly so about faced and started to return to camp. At 20 feet looked back and saw that it was following me but was not a bear but a large wolf, at which moment I stopped and put up a bluff. The wolf continued toward me for about 50' and then after looking things over, turned around and walked back to the point where first observed and forded the small creek beyond. In the meantime I advanced 100 feet closer thinking that the wolf was leaving the area. but instead he started to come toward me again and approached to within 200 feet of me, then returned to Weasel Point. At no time did the wolf run or act afraid. It turned again and came toward me for about 50 feet and then again returned to Weasel Point where it jumped up through a fissure in the cliffs where I had set my weasel traps and walked behind the first ridge 20' away. I continued to inspect my traps at the base of the cliff and looking up saw the wolf standing on the top of the ledge only 15 or 20' away and above me. It left immediately and continued up the canyon to the south of Lake Peters. These wolves are absolutely unafraid of man or gun and do not run as they usually do on contact with man. The first movement of the wolf toward me
