

The white-wing dove says who goos for who. I think I take the canyon for granted but when Victor who guides the boat across the river claimed on a trip thru the canyon that "the adventure in the canyon of Bocquillas is very good and beautiful" and we should always be appreciative of the beauty that has been recognized by one who has lived here in Bocquillas all his life.

Photo 830519-1 of Annette at mouth of Bocquillas with Fragmites communis to left. Birds in canyon: white-winged dove, turkey vulture, cliff swallow, raven.

These water marks could represent night-day fluctuations or recessional marks from last rains a week or so ago.

There are no water marks on cliffs in canyon.

This afternoon photos 830519-2 and 830519-3 of mouth of Bocquillas Canyon E of Rio Grande Village (same area as 830519-1)

Birds in area:

- |                                      |                        |
|--------------------------------------|------------------------|
| 14 turkey vulture                    | 1 yellow-billed cuckoo |
| 5 boat-tailed grackles               | 1 cardinal             |
| 2 summer tanager                     | 2 vermilion flycatcher |
| 2 white winged dove                  | 1 Cassin's flycatcher  |
| 1 cliff swallow                      | 2 night hawk           |
| 2 common raven                       |                        |
| 42 ♀ brown headed cowbird |                        |
| 48 ♂ bronzed cowbird      |                        |
| 4 area dove                          |                        |

The brown-headed cowbirds feed at 8' and travel and feed on ground in compact group. average 6" apart.

Have three calls, a recognition call like gurgling water, a high pitch call & a musical call.