"Shuffle, jump, toe, shuffle, jump, toe, flap, ballchange, flap, ballchange . . ." Nine men and women bounced up and down on the teak floor of the Process Studios. Their feet clicking and clacking, their arms flailing, their faces plastered with un-certain grins, the members of the Process Staff, a local acting troupe, plunged into their 4th First Annual Tap Dancing Lesson. The group is getting ready for an upcoming gala blowout.

"I've always gotten a big kick out of tap dancing," said David Ohle, the city's most frequent look-alike. As the recorded piano hammered out strains of "I've Got Rhythm," instructor Wayne S. Propst, Jr., floated neatly in time to the music, his feet keeping perfect beat. Behind him, like nine out-of-step Shirley Pimples, members of the troupe struggled to keep in step. One dancer, Dr. H.R. Burnheart, joked, "Sometimes I feel like an elephant."

Said Jas. Grauerholz, a certified PRIMITIVO, "The final objective is to stop just short." In the rotunda, shadowed by the twice-life-size pink basalt figure of Processor Wormbrand, Kenny Henny and Wife stood chatting volubly with Jimmy McCrary, slappleather poet, and Roger Martin, who has recently flown in from. Jack Moritz, only so lately withdrawn, and S. O'Dwyer, formerly attired in a calf-length penguin-feather boa, cut capers in the kitchen with Ms. O'Dwyer's mother-of-pearl virgin knife.

As the clatter of steel heels and toes gave way to the clink of bone china, all were pleasantly alarmed by the late arrival of out-of-towners M.E. Miller, Robert Anthony, Ed and Sylvia, and the Carpenters. Talk was cheap, and as your reporter left the rotunda for her sunrise meet with Dr. Bonanno, she saw Mr. Ohle in the gloom of the breeze way, sneezing in his suitcase, as Processor Grauerholz advised, "Sauve qui peut."

JELPONOSHKO SENTENCED

What is the price of teaching the Process? Je ELONOSHKO was sentenced to 3 years of prison and TROTSHENKO to 18 months. But it is not the length of the prison term that counts, but the prison's regime. In a communistic jail no prisoner is allowed to share his convictions with anyone. The punishments for doing it are so atrocious, that in the concentration camp of OBUHOVO, 15 prisoners sewed their lips in protest against the terror. This is from SAMIZDAT No. 32/2

WATERPROOF NEGRO DROWNED

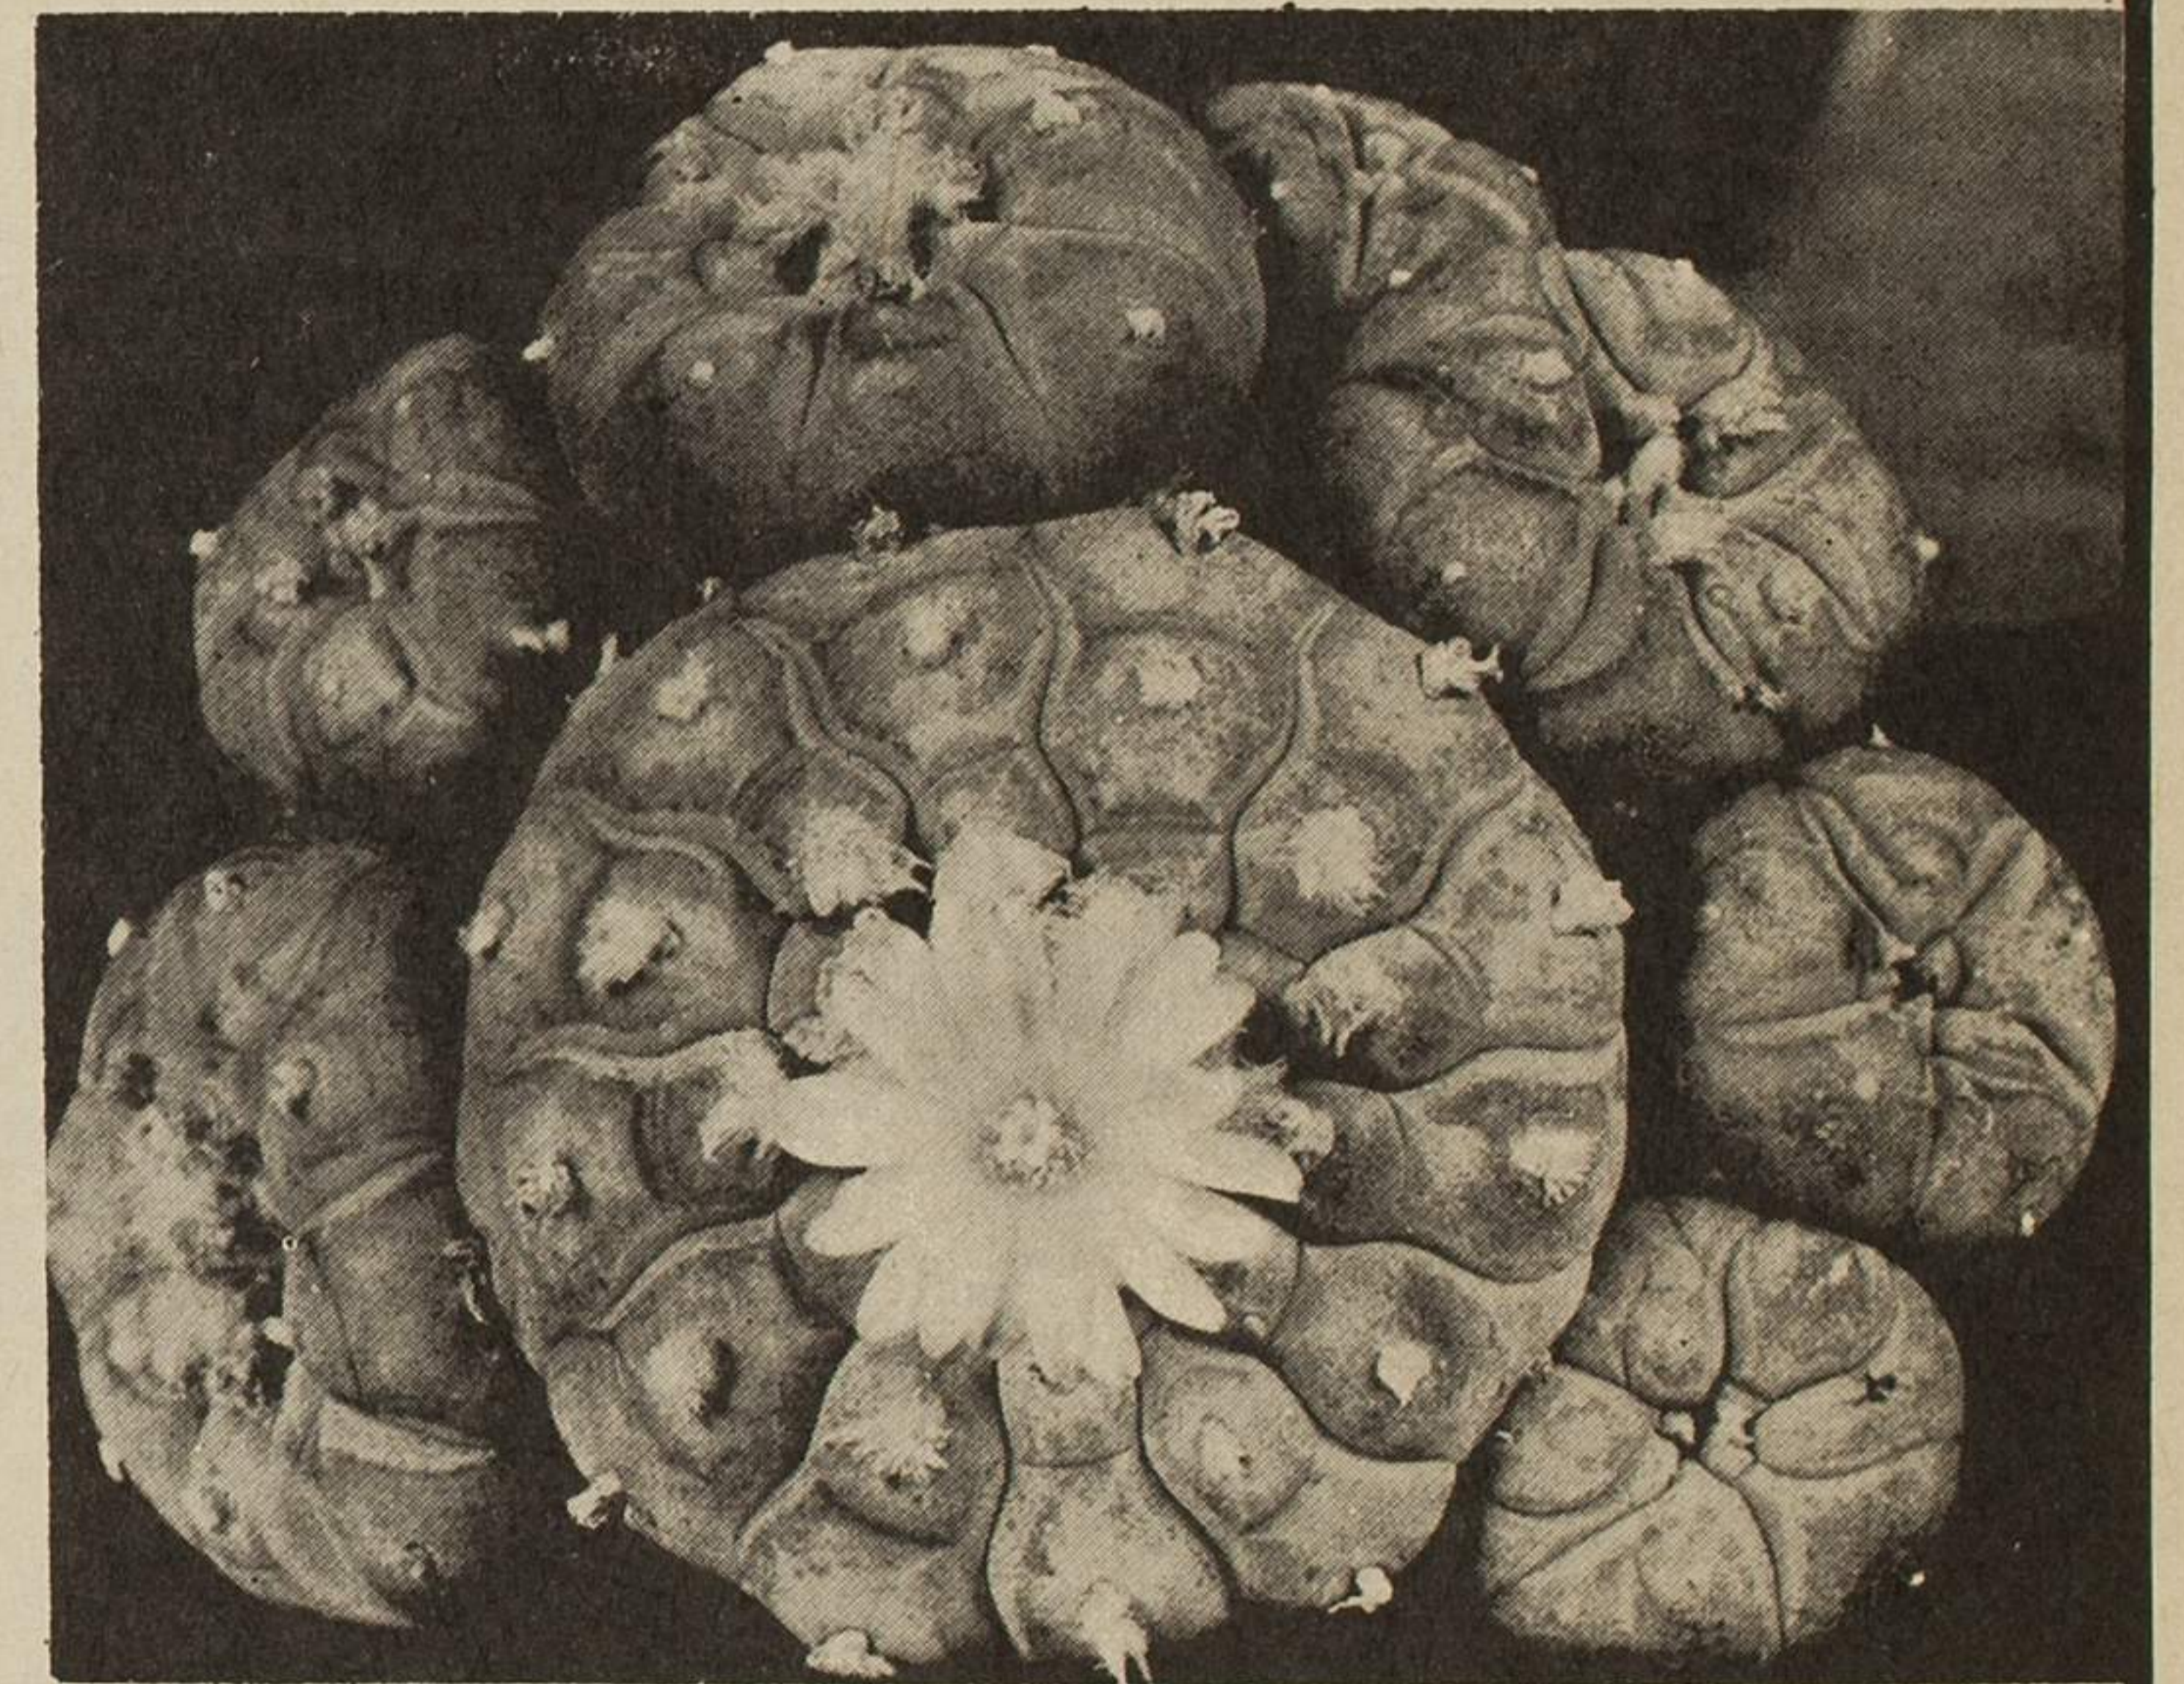

Waterproof, La.: The body of Bushboy Sugarman, nine, Negro, was found today by Grand Coteau Parish sheriff Wayne Peterman, floating in a brackish lake. Peterman said he thought the boy must have drowned of natural causes. No autopsy will be performed because of crabs and shrimp.

Dear Process:
I been using Ed as a hand man for 10 years. You or me couldn't talk to him a minute but what he would try to switch the conversation around to some criminal case or crimes like the Sugarman case or this lower farm hanging. He always had some crazy idea or theory about how these jobs were done and how police were messing it up. He also liked to talk wet women. He talked about how cute & wet Taunty Fernberg was and how nice a plump. And now I read all about what Ed did in Flainview Wisconsin and I am ashamed.

TENTORIUM

The insect-tentorium has had a long history of study, often yielding contradictory evidence. The ontogenetic contributions to the tentorium vary greatly (Snodgrass, 1960), and many theories have been proposed to account for its modifications. The history of these theories has been recently discussed by Matsuda (1965). Whatever its phylogenetic significance, the tentorium is an important structure formed by invaginations of the head capsule. Heddergott (1938) pointed out that there is a separation of the pterygote tentorium and hypopharynx in which the tentorial apophyses are volumetrically reduced and the hypopharynx is increased in volume. This does not occur in Mecoptera, where the tentorium is well developed, and the hypopharynx is ventrally displaced and greatly reduced.

Dear Process:
There is small doubt that the end of time is near at hand. As Goethe observes in his treatise (anti-Newtonian) on the nature of light, on the day of final judgement the sky will look and appear reddish-purple to the naked observer, but the sky appears reddish-purple to me already. Should I & my family squat and prepare for it?

Yours,

Ed. Note-- Remember, Pozeki what Wurmbrand said, "Some old fires make fine homes."

Dear Process:
I strongly agree with Pozeki Mott's view that if my world does not end by Friday, then it certainly, if possible, should. If not, something serious is afoot.

COW'S FOOT

A pickled cow's foot is being used in experiments at the lower farm to determine the best flooring for a barn according to T.T. Fernberg, dean of the ag-engineering.
