I read the Moon today, Oh boy. It is a well known fact that birds and wild animals know what other animals they have to fear. Thus, birds that will fly from a man or a dog will hop around a cow, even walking right under her leg. Man has now taken advantage of this fact to facilitate the slaughter of birds and other game. A Kansas man has invented a patent cow for hunters. The invention presents the perfect outward semblance of a most peaceable and amiable cow, but the forelegs and hindlegs are infact the two pairs of legs of two men. They are armed with guns and have a plentiful supply of ammunition. The patent Cow moves along the cowpaths like an ordinary harmless ruminant until it is in the midst of a flock of prairie hens or unsuspecting red squirrels, when it comes open and the two men inside blaze away. And that's not all folks. Oneba sees ALL tonight. He sees the Moon. Listen to this one, troops. When Hawthorne was writing the House of the Seven Gables he selected Pyncheon as the name of one of his characters. Of all possible names he might have selected, this one for some reason suited his purposes and simply "flashed" into his head. Whether he knew it at the time or not, New England was full of Pyncheons, and the book hardly had been placed on shelves when a reader wrote him a very bitter letter complaining grevously of the injustice done his worthy ancestor, Judge Pyncheon. In all Hawthorne is said to have answered complaints from forty seven of the pesky Pyncheons and had serious thoughts of publishing this correspondence in book form, but died before completing the task. And that isn't the half of it, friends. Here I am at my desk, my tools all around me, my boards, my books, my instruments, my pyramids and whatnots. I'm wearing the Radio Hat. The beautiful flux of celestial storms like rain on my helmet. Yes, I am finally at peace. The memoirs are written. The rises and the falls safely recorded. Two hearts now. One meat, one plastic. Something comes to mind now. I was riding the St. Phillip Street railcar. Something odd happened. A colored man came up to a white woman and, taking an aluminum comb from his hair I saw the glint of its precisely honed points. I then saw him pull the comb roughly through the flesh of the woman's pitifully rouged and sagging cheeks. There were sudden scarlet beads of red blood on the white flesh and something like candlewax dripping from the ruined eyes. She said nothing, the woman, she took the pain in silence. She braves it for the other White people on the car. I looked out of the window of the car toward South Park. I saw the arms of a century plant, cobra-like, yello & green.

KABUKI ACTOR DEAD: SWELLFISH POISONING

Mitsugoro Bando, 68, noted kabuki actor designated as a Human National Treasure, died of Swellfish poisoning at a restaurant in this City. He was pronounced Dead at the Memorial Hospital at 4:40 a.m. Thursday. Bando had dined on seafood, particularly Swellfish, at a party given by his local fans at Mme Dunbar's restaurant in the Eat-side Historic area. He returned to the Eldridge Hotel complaining of stomach pain about 10: a.m. that night. He then returned to the restaurant about midnight, apparently free of any discomfort, the spasm having abated. But then, at the bar after the meal, sipping La Perla Soda, he developed a high fever and began to walk toward his Hotel room. He was taken with a severe spasm on 12th Street. He was rushed to the Hospital, but was unfortunately dead on arrival. Bando's real name is Toshio Morita and his home address is at Moto-Akasaka, one-chrome in Minato Ward, Tokyo, Japan.

Pathetic

As you remember, Kenny Cubus returned from the dead 20 years ago in this paper. Today he is alive, as you and I, and remembers the refrigerated rooms and the silent days in frosty discomfort, his breath balling in front of his mouth like a cloud of snow.

KILLED BY BOY SCOUTS

They asked an old man for food and on being refused set upon him with knives. It happened in Fort Smith Arkansas at the turn of the century. Two boy scout tramps stopped at the home of an old man named Gramlich at Bloomer, Sebastian county, and asked for food. When Gramlich refused to give them anything the tramps set upon him with knives and cut him to death. Both escaped.

The two young sodomy experts with their salivary lippss hanging like warm liver sagging through a coarse grate decided they'd rather see little Richard dead than to escape their sexy clutches. The white gas was sprinkled in front of a closet door. On the inside of this closet there lay Richard with his hands and bound together and attached by a rope to an I-hook in the ceiling, scream-

OBSERVE LIGHTS IN HEAVENS: Remarkable illuminations were observed in the Northern heavens on Friday and Saturday nights, the bright diffused white and yellow lights, continuing thru the nite until they disappeared at daylight. The science editor of the Moon, Professor Burnheart, says that the phenomenon may be connected with important changes on the Sun's surface causing electrical discharges. He mentions a similar occurrence in 1883, which was directly traceable to an outbreak of the Krakatoa volcano. Reports from Copenhagen and Koenigsberg tell of the same great lights being visible in those Cities, and it is presumed that they are visible throughout Northern Europe. Some goats have been found dead.

TIN CAN ALMOST KILLS INFANT Child Put's Molasses Receptacle Over Baby's Head, Causing Household Panic in Eud ora. While the 8mo. old baby of a farmer here was in the house alone with it's 8yr old brother the latter shoved an empty tin gallon molasses can down over its head. A rim on the inside of the can slipped and fastened under the baby's lip, and the little brother could not pull the can off. He became frightened frightened and ran out to his mother who was boiling crawfish near the garden. Attracted by the baby's screams (Continued)

the mother ran like a white coward into the house and tried to pull the shoved down can off the little head, with the success of Earl Butz and his Happy America tour. A neighbor said, "I can split that can with mule shears if this can is just a little rusty or weak." When that failed, he hitched up his Oldsmobile and tried to tear the darn thing off with a rope tied to the bumper. Just after the first little crunching pitch forward on the asphalt for the child, the wife took the can off easily, and the baby was half-smothered. The head of the little boy was terribly black and blue, he was crying the mother was hysterical, the father sat crying silently in the car. The sun spiked

LIGHTNING KILLS

A young man is struck during a storm that ended a baseball game in South Park. Special to the MOON: Ovid Hawks was killed in South Park today by lightning during an electrical rain-storm. With others he was in a ball game when the storm came up, and all of them collected in a group. After a while the young Hawks left the others, saying as he went, "Let's play ball!" He had scarcely uttered the words when the lightning struck him, causing instant death. His shoes were found 20 ft from the body, in the vicinity of 3rd base, smoldering. Otherwise the body was undamaged. None of the others in the party were injured. Hawks had wed only the day before. The bride was in the bleachers and saw the whole incident.
