

HAWFINCH.

(Coccothraustes vespertina, Linn.)

In Quercus.

The Hawfinch is found in the same localities as the Brambling, and is equally common. It is a stout bird, with a very short, thick bill, and a very small, bright eye. The plumage is brown above, and white below, with a few black spots on the wings and tail. The male has a red forehead, and the female has a red breast. The young are born in the middle of June, and are fed by the parents until they are able to fly. The Hawfinch is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

We have known the Hawfinch, in the month of March, and a few in the month of April, and a few in the month of May. It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

In the month of March, and a few in the month of April, and a few in the month of May. It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

According to Mr. Latham, this bird breeds in the month of May, and its young are born in the middle of June. It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

The young are born in the middle of June, and are fed by the parents until they are able to fly. It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

The male has a red forehead, and the female has a red breast. The young are born in the middle of June, and are fed by the parents until they are able to fly. It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.

It is a very common bird in the country, and is often seen in the fields and woods. It is a very hardy bird, and is able to withstand the cold of winter. It is also a very good singer, and its song is often heard in the morning. The Hawfinch is a very useful bird, as it feeds on the seeds of the trees and shrubs, and thus helps to keep the country free from vermin.