

PARADISORNIS RUDOLPHI, Finsch.

W. Hart del. et lith.

Mintern Bros. imp.

Paradisornis rudolphi
(1886).
France,
Papua

This wonderful
that, among all Accustomed as flowing yellow we find to be the

The original Hunstein, and the Paradisornis being Crown Prince of Sogeri district
subsequently with
in South Kensington
by him to the British
up to the present

The following

"Male. Front
shen, which disa
and nape cherry
lesser and middle
the wings black.
greenish, towards
into the ultramar
mixed with dark
blackish grey, with plumes are divided ultramarine blue a shining brown; the
they are entirely b
inwards, are bright
apices into bright g
brown feathers str
brighter edgings, a
feathers carry at th
disappear almost e
the spatula-shaped
to violet; below bl
yellowish white; fe

"Female. Flank
dark cross bands;
which disappear to
black, beneath gre

The figure of the specimen, when the kindly supervised M Plate gives a more specimen is in the L
in the British Muse