

ACANTHO

Acanthopneuste superciliosa haloptilus, Acantopneuste of the known I have only Western Australia, but he although a very local bird hard to give a decided p only whistles. Its food during which its delicat late number being expen

 the into the deepest int the species occasionally ground in search of food a rapid zigzag motion;
 moving at the same time

The nest, which is com posed of dried fine grass together with animal wa mingled together; the nest is quiet. The egg in some instances is a de finished over the sur assume the form of a no

The sexes present lit pointed from her mate

From the head, a of the tail-feathers bla brown; space between a slender stripe beneath rich chestnut, bordered and under tail-coverts all black; legs dark
 The figures are those