

TURBID EUPHONIA

THE HISTORY OF

The History of the Turbid Euphonia, a new and curious species of the genus Euphonia, discovered by the late Mr. John L. Smith, F.R.S. &c. in the year 1785. By the same Author. In two Volumes. The first Volume contains the Description of the Species, and the second Volume contains the History of the Species, and the Life of the Author.

I have the pleasure to inform you, that the first Volume of the History of the Turbid Euphonia, is now published, and is to be had of the Booksellers, in the Strand, and of the Author, at his House, in the City. The second Volume, which contains the History of the Species, and the Life of the Author, is now in the Press, and will be published in a few Days. I have the pleasure to inform you, that the first Volume of the History of the Turbid Euphonia, is now published, and is to be had of the Booksellers, in the Strand, and of the Author, at his House, in the City. The second Volume, which contains the History of the Species, and the Life of the Author, is now in the Press, and will be published in a few Days.

The first Volume of the History of the Turbid Euphonia, is now published, and is to be had of the Booksellers, in the Strand, and of the Author, at his House, in the City. The second Volume, which contains the History of the Species, and the Life of the Author, is now in the Press, and will be published in a few Days. I have the pleasure to inform you, that the first Volume of the History of the Turbid Euphonia, is now published, and is to be had of the Booksellers, in the Strand, and of the Author, at his House, in the City. The second Volume, which contains the History of the Species, and the Life of the Author, is now in the Press, and will be published in a few Days.