

SECTION OF CONCRETE

and its uses.

Concrete is a mixture of cement and sand or gravel, which is used for making walls, floors, and other parts of buildings.

Cement is a powder made from lime and sand, which is used for making concrete.

Sand is a fine material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Gravel is a coarse material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Concrete is a mixture of cement and sand or gravel, which is used for making walls, floors, and other parts of buildings.

Cement is a powder made from lime and sand, which is used for making concrete.

Sand is a fine material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Gravel is a coarse material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Concrete is a mixture of cement and sand or gravel, which is used for making walls, floors, and other parts of buildings.

Cement is a powder made from lime and sand, which is used for making concrete.

Sand is a fine material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Gravel is a coarse material made from small pieces of stone, which is used for making concrete.

Concrete is a mixture of cement and sand or gravel, which is used for making walls, floors, and other parts of buildings.