

BIBLIOPHILON MYSTICUS

Book 10

The first chapter of the tenth book of the Mystical Library is devoted to the description of the various kinds of books which are to be found in the library of the mystic. The author begins by stating that the books are arranged in three classes: the first class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the sciences, the second class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the arts, and the third class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the mysteries.

The second chapter of the tenth book of the Mystical Library is devoted to the description of the various kinds of books which are to be found in the library of the mystic. The author begins by stating that the books are arranged in three classes: the first class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the sciences, the second class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the arts, and the third class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the mysteries.

The third chapter of the tenth book of the Mystical Library is devoted to the description of the various kinds of books which are to be found in the library of the mystic. The author begins by stating that the books are arranged in three classes: the first class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the sciences, the second class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the arts, and the third class consists of the books which are necessary for the study of the mysteries.