

PHYSIOLOGY

Chapter I

The human body is composed of various parts, each of which performs a specific function. The organs of the body are the parts which are specialized for the performance of certain functions. The organs of the body are the parts which are specialized for the performance of certain functions.

The human body is composed of various parts, each of which performs a specific function. The organs of the body are the parts which are specialized for the performance of certain functions. The organs of the body are the parts which are specialized for the performance of certain functions.