

PHLETHORIS INTERMEDIA

Middle-sized Heron

Phlethorus intermedia (Linn. Syst. Nat., p. 85, 1758.
Phlethorus intermedia (Linn. Syst. Nat., p. 85, 1758.
Phlethorus intermedia (Linn. Syst. Nat., p. 85, 1758.)

The species of the genus Phlethorus has a slender and well-proportioned body, and its plumage is very uniform and very white, especially the breast and the neck, which are the most conspicuous parts in the country. It is the most common of the herons, and is found in all parts of the country, from the coast to the interior. It is very common in the marshes, and is especially abundant in the lowlands. It is very common in the marshes, and is especially abundant in the lowlands. It is very common in the marshes, and is especially abundant in the lowlands.

The only marked difference between the male and the female is in the color of the bill, which is black in the male and reddish in the female.

In the male the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish. In the female the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish. In the male the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish. In the female the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish. In the male the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish. In the female the upper mandible is black, and the lower is reddish.

The species is of the subgenus Phlethorus.