Phaethornis Adolphi, Bourc.

Vol. I. Pl. 35.

Pygmornis Adolphi, "Sallé, MSS." Cab. et Hein. Mus. Hein. Theil iii. p. 7, note.Habitat. Central America.

"This," says Mr. Salvin, "is an abundant species in the forest about Yzabal, but the density of the under growth renders it extremely difficult to obtain a shot at so small and active an object. The bird is by no means shy, and takes but little notice of an observer—even searching the flowers almost within arm's reach for the insects and honey therein contained. In movement it is extremely elegant and graceful, and, flitting from flower to flower, shows its beautifully-formed tail conspicuously in every motion. Like all others of its family, it selects a small twig for its perch, giving preference to a dead one. While at rest it trims its feathers dexterously with its bill, which every now and then it cleans by rubbing it first on one side and then on the other of the twig on which it stands."—Ibis, vol. i. p. 127.

39. PYGMORNIS GRISEOGULARIS, Gould.Phaethornis griseogularis, Gould

Vol. I. Pl. 36.

Pygmornis griseigularis, Cab. et Hein. Mus. Hein. Theil iii. p. 8.Habitat. New Granada; and Ecuador?

In my description of this species I have inadvertently stated that it has a crescent of black across the breast, which is not the case.

Mr. Bell of New York informs me that he has heard the "little Pygmornis of Panama" (by which I believe the present bird is intended) "sing beautifully, the notes forming a soft, shrill, and pretty song."

40. PYGMORNIS STRIIGULARIS, Gould.Phaethornis striigularis, Gould

Vol. I. Pl. 37.

Pygmornis striigularis, Cab. et Hein. Mus. Hein. Theil iii. p. 7, note.Habitat. New Granada.
