

ter. In a letter
picapa parva was
who were the
of the common
quills and the
a young male
well-expressed 1863, p. 8841;
ge. Reading, for

house—Tresco
came to a con-
e were looking
up its tail as it
repeated once or
mistook it, with a
ne tail was very
and full; it had
strong, but was
being too much

lled examples, I

—
neighbourhood of
annual migratory
at the young bird
end of October,
in those gardens.
minds one of the
repeatedly, and

ects. It builds its
the British Isles.

end of March or
n and throat, and
again cast at the

the Himalayas to
is more common
often a party of five
nging to the trunk.
is, however, fre-
—Birds of India.

throat.