

BLACK-THROATED DIVER

Colaptes auratus (Linn.)

In Florida, on a small island.

The Black-throated Diver is a very common bird on the small island of Key West, Florida, where it is found in great numbers. It is a very active and restless bird, and is always seen in the water, where it feeds on small fish and other aquatic insects. It is a very noisy bird, and its loud, harsh notes are heard in every part of the island.

The Black-throated Diver is a very common bird on the small island of Key West, Florida, where it is found in great numbers. It is a very active and restless bird, and is always seen in the water, where it feeds on small fish and other aquatic insects. It is a very noisy bird, and its loud, harsh notes are heard in every part of the island. The Black-throated Diver is a very common bird on the small island of Key West, Florida, where it is found in great numbers. It is a very active and restless bird, and is always seen in the water, where it feeds on small fish and other aquatic insects. It is a very noisy bird, and its loud, harsh notes are heard in every part of the island.

The Black-throated Diver is a very common bird on the small island of Key West, Florida, where it is found in great numbers. It is a very active and restless bird, and is always seen in the water, where it feeds on small fish and other aquatic insects. It is a very noisy bird, and its loud, harsh notes are heard in every part of the island. The Black-throated Diver is a very common bird on the small island of Key West, Florida, where it is found in great numbers. It is a very active and restless bird, and is always seen in the water, where it feeds on small fish and other aquatic insects. It is a very noisy bird, and its loud, harsh notes are heard in every part of the island.

1880