† Meals. * Telegraph.

The attention of passengers is directed to the elevation of each station.

Just after leaving the city for the West, on the south side of the road will be seen a Government camp, where soldiers are stationed to guard the bridge, the city, and the situation generally, when necessary.

From North Platte our route is due west. It is 8 4-10 miles to Nichols—an unimportant side-track. North Platte City is in plain sight from the station—as is also the North and South Platte Rivers—and the Valleys of the same.

From Nichols it is 8 5-10 miles to O'Fallon's Bluffs—situated in the sand hills, where the bluffs on the right come close to the river. On the south side of the river are the famous O'Fallon's Bluffs, a series of sand hills interspersed with ravines and gulches, which come close to the river's bank, forming abrupt bluffs, which turned the emigrants back from the river, forcing them to cross these sand hills, a distance of eight miles,
