

stated, "very well kept up and one of the very beautiful countries." Every thing is kept "up-to now" in the way of farms and highways but, the railroads with little toy like engines and coaches divided into sections seem so much different from the R.R. in the U. S. A. The heavy truck horses are generally driven tandem instead of abreast, and on the left of the streets. In fact every thing is a bit different here, even, the odds are not as they are in the U. S. A. But the change of scenery and customs makes quite a novelty for we "Bloody Yanks" as the English call us. The word "Bloody" being used over here instead of the familiar "Damn" as in the States.
