MARVIN SWITZER, BOGUE HIGH JUNIOR, shown above with "The Green Weiny," really looks forward to nice Sundays, when he can call up a few friends, get the dogs out, and have a hardy hunt, says the Bogue Blue & Gold.

Capturing Mr. Wily Coyote requires three items, according to Switzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Switzer of Nicodemus: a super-sturdy pickup able to leap wide gullies in a single shift, a good sized dog box, and 2 or 3 "catch" dogs (the smooth-haired greyhounds) and 2 or 3 "kill" dogs (the shaggy greyhounds.)

Three Bogue High School students are avid coyote hunters: Switzer, Frankie Buss and Dale Jones. "The main reason I like the sport is to watch the dogs catch the coyote," Frankie says. "I go hunting about once a week. When my Dad, George, and I catch a coyote, we usually sell the hide and get from 2 to 5 dollars. We take seven dogs each time we go hunting."

Marvin, who's been hunting ever since he was "knee high to a dog," usually takes 6 to 7 greyhounds when he goes hunting. "It's a sport that is entertaining and one I like," he says. Dale, who has been enjoying the sport for 3 years, feels like coyote hunting is great competition because the coyote is a sly animal. "Coyote hunting is a dangerous sport when it comes to driving in unfamiliar terrain," Dale says. "It also helps the farmers by eliminating some of the coyotes who kill their livestock."
