

Why we observe Mothers' Day.

This is a subject which appeals to and touches the heart of almost every individual. From the time that Mothers' Day was suggested much good has been done.

To foster a better and higher love for mother; to raise the day set aside in her honor from one of ideal sentimentalism to one of allegiance to the ideals of womanhood and then to perpetuate and protect this true Mothers' Day; that, in a nutshell is the purpose of this our national organization. As a result sentiment in the greatest of all women-mother has been aroused.

Mothers' Day did not originate from a mother nor did fathers' day originate from a father; the fact that we see fit to celebrate at our own suggestion and not at the instance of some parent makes it more impressive. To observe mothers' Day because some mother originated it it would not have the same bearing.

Just One hundred and five years after George Washington said "All that I am and all that I ever hope to be I owe to my mother"; Miss Ann Jarvis, of Philadelphia, started what is now an international holiday; Her mother had been dead one year when she invited a friend to remember the anniversary of her death and from this occasion she had instilled within her the idea of interesting others in trying to establish a
