

useful to you. The vocational rehabilitation agency has responsibility for providing counseling, training, and other services which disabled people may need to help them get back on the job.

You may also get employment counseling and selective placement services at the local office of your State Employment Service.

People who have been found eligible for disability insurance benefits or for childhood disability benefits will not be paid those benefits if, without good cause, they refuse rehabilitation services offered to them by their State vocational rehabilitation agencies.

If You Recover or Return To Work

You will not be found eligible under the disability provisions in the social security law unless it appears from the medical evidence that your condition is likely to continue indefinitely and is a condition that prevents you from doing any substantial gainful work. But the human body and human willpower often perform surprising feats—your condition may improve or you may learn new skills and be able to go to work.

If, after you have received notice that you have been found “disabled” under the social security law, your condition does improve,

