

FREEDOM BOOKS opened in 1988 as Alkebu-Ian Books and Gifts because then there were no local African (Black) bookstores. So, we try to fill that void.

We believe, that it is fundamental that African people have access to information about and written by African people.

We believe, that it is absolutely necessary for African people to have an information resource center owned and controlled by Africans because this will enable us to effectively deal with issues that confront us daily.

Therefore, we have developed the Center of African Thought that offers workshops, seminars and packets of information that will educate and identify skills for individuals, families, organizations, etc. Some of the topics are self-esteem, infant mortality, health issues, male responsibility, teen pregnancy, counterinsurgency against African people.
