Dear Coach Rogers:

I remember that you told us to get any officials that we wanted, but we thought the best were none too good, so we engaged E. C. Quigley and his son, Heinie. They do a good deal of work together.

However, when E. C. Quigley works with any other official, Quigley is the man that runs the ball game because of his dominant and efficient personality. I trust that these two men are satisfactory.

With every good wish, I am

Sincerely yours,
