

This leaves him 64 points short of Park's low figure of 120. He thus must average 21.3 through the 3-game tournament route. This would be an increase of 6.1 over his current five-game figure.

If the pre-meet form chart follows pattern, the tourney will crown its second non-pivot individual point champion. Only Lane has been able to break through the galaxy of centers, which have walked off with eight of the nine previous individual scepters. The Oklahoma nifty missed a repeat by eight points last year as Duncan brought the title back to the post-men with 75.

Top center among tournament teams....and this includes guest Cornell.....is Kansas State's Jack Parr who is travelling at a 16.8 pace. And he is no better than fifth on the pre-meet roles.

Here's the way the Top Fifteen lineup through games of Dec. 19:
