

Dear Mr. Pierce,

Cornell returned to the win column against Brown, and Chuck Rolles provided a possible angle for the tourney. Rolles broke the Barton Hall scoring record with 37 points. (see clipping) Chuck has a tremendous amount of crowd appeal, as he stands only 5-6. He was one of the most colorful and popular players in last year's Dixie Classic. Rolles has three basic shots: a set shot which is usually taken from about ten feet in front of the midcourt line, jumping one-handers from the side which arch through the nets, and a drive-in through the right side of the key hole which has been almost a sure two-pointer.

The figures on Rolles after four games are: Time played (149 out of a possible 160), field goals attempted 79, made 41, pct. 519; free throws attempted 29, made 21, pct. 724; rebounds 9, assists 34 (he leads the team), personal fouls 11, total points 103, scoring average 25.8

Cornell has one more game before the tourney; that is against Washington University (of St. Louis) on Friday evening, Dec. 23rd.

Cornell plays a double pivot with three outside men for the most part on offense and usually uses a man-to-man defense. The starters will almost definitely include Ray Zelek (c) at one pivot spot, plus Dick Meade (g) and Chuck Rolles (g) at two of the outside positions.
