

road against Indiana and Drake. It was the second straight here this season, however, going with the opener against Texas Tech.

Loyola led only once, at 3-2, in the first two minutes of the game. K-State quickly erased that and led by 17-7 after 10 minutes.

The loss was Loyola's second. The Loyola club is the same one, incidentally, which lost to Southwestern of Winfield in the NAIA tournament in Kansas City last spring.

Dave Bernaderet, the only Loyola starter as tall as 6-4, led his squad with 18 points, and in rebounds with 10.

Little Pachin Vicens, the colorful K-State guard, had another big night, although he scored only four points. He continually fired the ball in to Parr, making the big boy's job easy under the basket. Vicens also spearheaded an occasional Wildcat fast break.

Neither team burned the net shooting free throws, but Loyola really was wretched. The Lions hit 14 of 43 free tosses—a worse percentage than they had from the field. K-State hit 18 of 40 charities.
