

Cagers Beat Colgate Five

The turning point of the game followed as Girodano stole an errant Cornell pass, rifled the ball to Stratton, and then, the latter unaccountably blew the lay up. Cornell took possession, and Rolles scored in two foul shots making the score, 80-76. Colgate called time out, but to no avail. For the Big Red staged a brilliant freeze, the irresistible Rolles deftly controlling the ball to the delight of the wildly cheering throng. The referee shrilled his whistle, Zelek sank two anti-climactical fouls, and the game was in the record books.

Fouls were the key to the Red victory. The rapid accumulation of penalties by Colgate's big men, the 6'6 Milt Graham and high scoring Jack Nichols crippled the visitor's offense. In contrast, when forward Max Mattes quickly drew four personals, coach Royner Greene was able to send in the capable Pearson, whose eight points rocketed Cornell to a sensational victory.
