

Thompson Cool in Clutch.

Duncan was the big gun with thirty-four points, twenty-four of them in the first half. He and a cool sophomore named Gary Thompson held the key to the victory.

Kansas held the lead from the mid-point of the first half until Duncan laid up the goal which ended the Jayhawk domination.

Once Iowa State had that 78-75 lead the Cyclones played it cautiously. Larry Davenport came off the bench to goal one for the Jayhawks shortly afterwards, (with 3:06 left), then Iowa State took the ball out and brought it in to stall for more than a minute.

With two minutes left, the Cyclones called a time out. Then Thompson, a fancy sophomore who three times was an all-state high schooler in Iowa, forced K. U.'s Dallas Dobbs into his second foul of the game. The cool Thompson threw both in for an 80-77 lead.

Kansas came down court only to have Stan Frahm intercept a pass thrown by K. U.'s John Parker. But K. U. got it again on a sideline scramble. Gene Elstun shot and missed and Iowa State's Chuck Vogt was called for charging after rebounding the shot. Davenport
