

Iowa State Collapses After Early Lead—

K-STATE SMASHES CYCLONES, 98-77

By Staff Writer.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—There was a "cyclone" loose in Municipal Auditorium here Wednesday afternoon but it wasn't the Iowa State basketball team which bears that nickname.

Kansas State, going into the second quarter trailing by three, rushed home 30 points in 10 minutes to build a solid base for an eventual 98-77 victory.

Iowa State, owner of a surprise 25-22 lead at the end of the first quarter, suddenly became very impotent at scoring, making one field goal in an eight-point second period.

The Wildcats, by virtue of the victory in the losers' bracket in the annual Big Seven tournament, finished fifth. Iowa State wound up sixth.

The surprise in Iowa State's game wasn't that the Cyclones lost by 21 points but that they lost by only 21 points after being haunted by such a horrible eight minutes.

It was 52-33 at intermission, but Coach Chick Sutherland's team scrapped back to cut the lead to 70-58 and they might have done even better if center Chuck Duncan and, later, Don DeKoster hadn't fouled out.

Duncan is the Cyclones' biggest at 6 feet 5 inches. And he was also their best with 21 points and 12 rebounds. It was also Chuck's absence in the second quarter—he was taken out with three fouls—that opened the gates.

14 Straight Points.

It was a 32-30 game, favor of K-State, when Duncan went out. Starting at 38-32, the Wildcats ripped off 14 straight points to run up their halftime lead.

By the time the Cyclones got in scoring stride again, they trailed by 24 points at 59-35.

A problem that will become familiar during the regular season—lack of height—plagued Iowa State all the way. In the first half it was largely 6-11 Jerry Jung, who bagged 14 points.

Jung, who can out-rebound most of the Cyclones standing flatfooted (and generally does), was removed early in the second half. The report is that he had a dent in his brow which needed X-ray.

Balanced scoring—there were five Wildcats who tallied 11 or more—was a big aid to the Kansas State, which shot 47 per cent. Jesse Prisock was high with 16.

Starts 2 Newcomers.

Sutherland started a pair of newcomers, guard Tom LeBuhn and forward Howard Johnson, and both played well. Johnson, a good shot, tallied 13 points, six less than the ever-valuable Dutch Van Cleave.

Kansas State's 98 points was the highest ever scored in a regulation game in this tournament. That 103-102 victory by Stanford over Iowa State was under experimental rules.

The Wildcats barely missed hitting 100. Reserve guard Bob Smith missed two free throws after the game had ended.
