

- Waldemar Gelteh, professor of violin. Music appreciation, travel talks covering people of Southern Europe and other ~~wise~~ general topics.
- Hilden Gibson, instructor of political science and sociology. One of the faculty's most brilliant younger members. Speaks on political and social problems.
- Mary Grant, associate professor of Latin and Greek. A witty and absorbing speaker in the field of literature and mythology.
- John Hankins, associate professor of English. A salty speaker in the field of English literature and life in general.
- H. W. Hargiss, track coach. Athletics, physical training, and character building.
- Gwinn Henry, director of athletics. Athletics.
- Helen Rhoda Hoopes, assistant professor of English. Poetry.
- R. S. Howey, associate professor of economics. Recent economic developments in the fields of finance and foreign trade.
- H. B. Hungerford, professor of entomology. Has an absorbing talk, "Insects and the Affairs of Man."
- Vic Hurt, assistant football coach. Football. Usually shows movies with his talk.
- J. J. Jakosky, dean of the School of Engineering and Architecture. Subjects in the field of engineering and engineering education.
- H. H. Lane, professor of zoology and curator of museums. Has an interesting talk on the history of the human ear. Also general subjects in the field of prehistoric life.
- Lowell R. Laudon, associate professor of geology. An experienced man in travel talks.
- Paul B. Lawson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and professor of entomology. Inspiring speaker on human relations for young and old. Also gives same talk as Hungerford, and one called "Songs of the Insects."
- W. R. Maddox, assistant professor of political science. Political and social trends.
- W. O. Miessner, professor of education. This nationally known leader in the field of public school music speaks with authority on music appreciation and music education.
- U. G. Mitchell, professor of mathematics. Speaks in a surprisingly interesting way on "History of Numbers."
- R. C. Moore, professor of geology. An able speaker either to scientific groups or lay audiences on Kansas geology and geological history, and mineral wealth of the state.