

Brushing surface with floor brush in both directions to produce canvas-like finish.

Tamping white portland cement mortar into grooves at lines.

White portland cement mortar is pressed into place with pointing trowel, finished with an edger, and then excess mortar is brushed away.

One good job paves the way for others. Bulley & Andrews obtained contract to build these two concrete courts after doing satisfactory work on the court which is described by Alfred Simmons.

