Dear Miss Bourquardez:

The questionnaires which you requested us to send from this office have been sent, and I trust that the replies will be coming in to you before long.

Personally, I believe that in the present war situation we need something like this to stimulate us to, because there will be only a few persons taking part unless a change takes place to make them really cognizant of what we are trying to do. We need some approach that we have not had in the past for these younger people.

I don't know just how this can be done, but frankly that strikes me as a very necessary thing. The national leaders perhaps should prescribe the dosages, but to me it is not apparent at the present time.

Very sincerely yours,
