'Phog' Allen Hurls Amateur Blast

LAWRENCE, Kan., Dec. 7 (U.P.)— Dr. Forrest C. (Phog) Allen charged today that college bowl-winning teams were more professional than the Chicago Bears.

"The Bears, at least, publish the salaries paid their players," the K.
U. basketball coach said. "It's all clandestine in the colleges but they're getting paid one way or another.

"All you have to do is to listen to those boys talk. My informants many times have been men on the teams involved. They talk freely about it but it's still 'news' to the colleges.

"When we get into the big time bowl stuff, it becomes highly pro-fessionalized because the teams are out fighting for those bids and for the men who can earn those bids."

Declining to name schools for the record but mentioning them privately, he said one midwest school was paying its athletes through $150-a-month highway department jobs with $40 of that sent directly to the university to pay educational expenses.

"When you get into that, you find a close tie-up with political powers," Allen pointed out.

He said many different ways were employed to pay college athletes, the old fraternity system in which the houses took in the stars; legislative scholarships, payment by wealthy followers of the schools, payment by the Athletic association directly to the university, and state jobs, to name a few.

Allen cut loose first an "professionalized" bowl teams in a speech yesterday afternoon before the Kansas City Rotary club. He is district governor of the Rotarians.

Allen told his brother Rotarians, among other things, that football and basketball teams of colleges and universities were actually being run by gamblers and predicted a football scandal worse than last year's New York cage sports scandal.
