

Haskell
Betty Hohl

It is our aim this year to make the Y.W.C.A. meetings at Haskell meet a definite need in the lives of the girls. The underlying and continuous effort of all our meetings will be to bring its members to a religious consciousness. Since so much of the school life of the girls at Haskell is institutionalized, we shall try to present meetings to them which will give the girls a chance to develop latent powers, a chance to choose for themselves, a chance to think for themselves, and to develop not only their mind, but themselves both socially and physically. We shall plan discussions which will give them a chance to think of others and serve others. Our aim is to help each girl see the art of leadership, and to give them the chance to give and take, and live with others. Programs on health, on vocations, on etiquette, boy and girl relationships, beside other good times, are being planned which will hold the interest of the girls and build a profitable organization.

So here's to an interesting and creative year in our Y.W.C.A. work at Haskell.

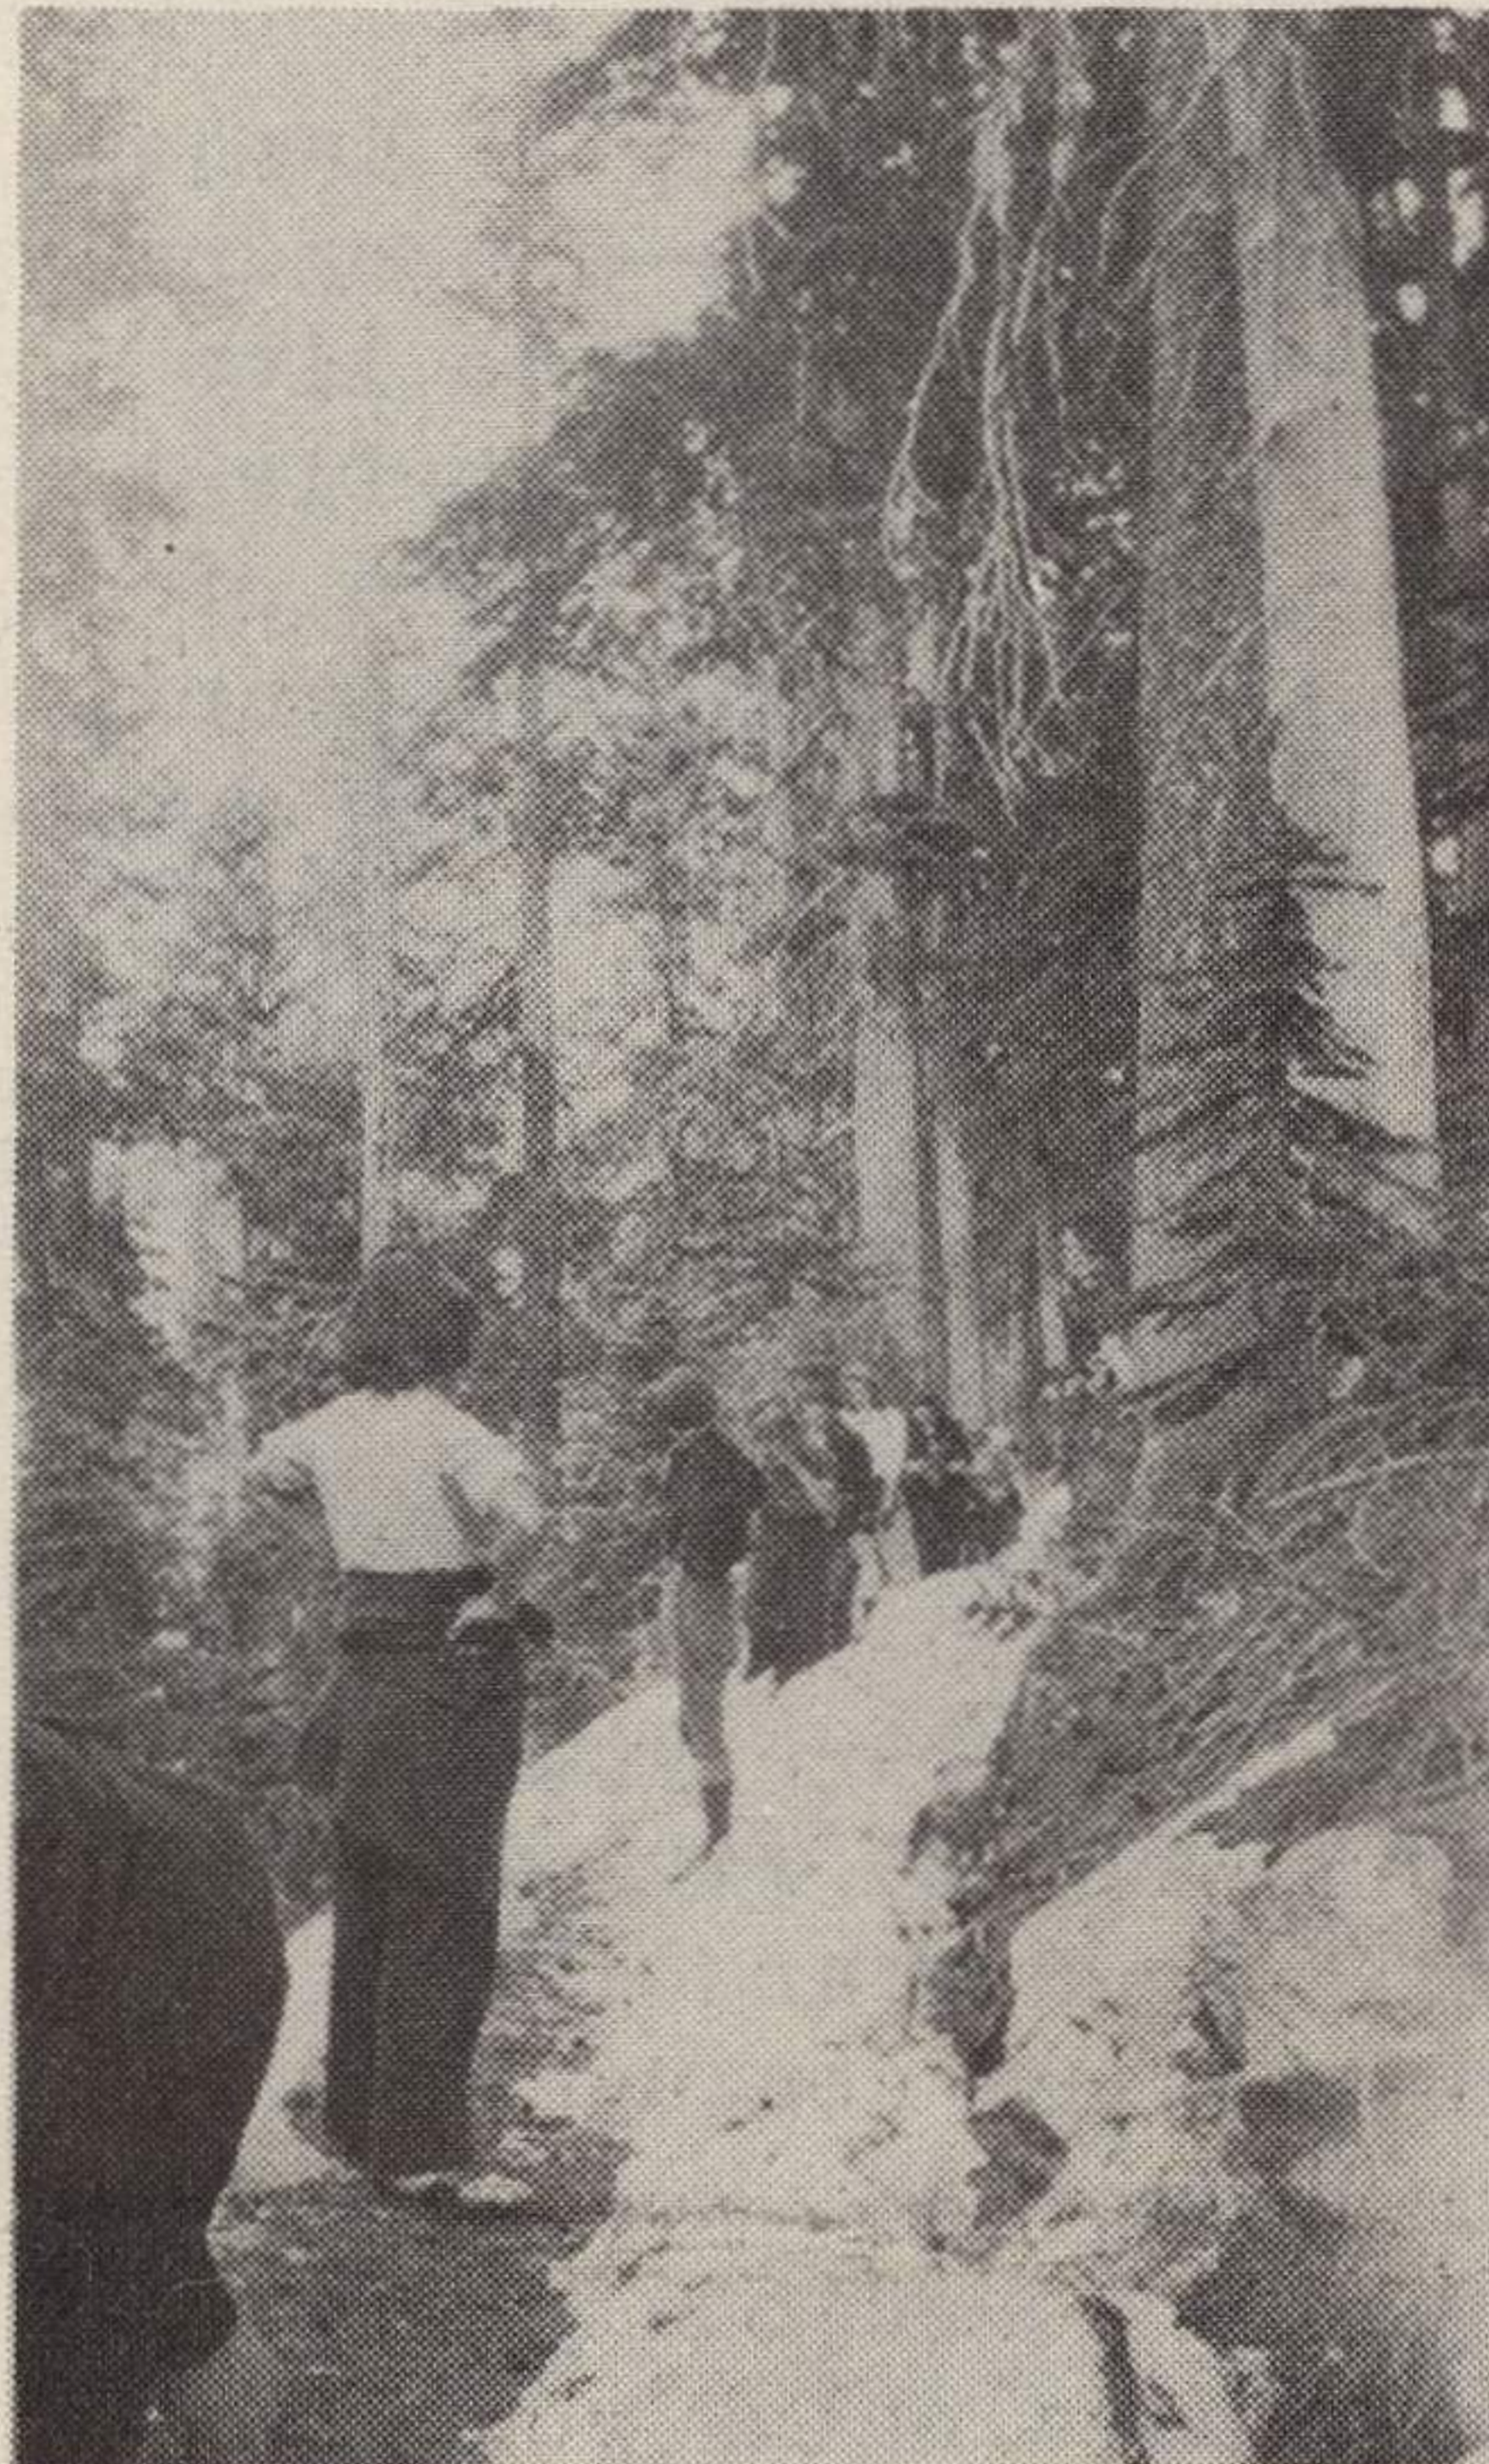

F.E.S.S.F.

You saw on the first page that these letters stand for Far Eastern Student Service Fund.

But more, they stand for a humanitarian service in which every student can help.

Chinese students have been driven from their universities and suffer immense hardships. For the past two years we have raised $400.00 to send to our brother students in the Orient. Last year Paul Moritz, a K. U. student, was our ambassador of good will to them. This is brotherhood in action!

SETSE-POOC
Ruth Yeomans

Imagine sliding down a glacier in June, singing around a campfire at night with dark snow-capped mountains looming up around you, meeting interesting college students from seven states, listening and talking to challenging, wide-awake leaders--all this, and more, is Estes.

Who is not interested in boy and girl relationships, in developing his personality, in current affairs, and in thinking through his religious perplexities? Out at Estes one has a chance to dig into the subject which interests him most. One has the opportunity of listening to such outstanding leaders as T. Z. Koo of China; Dr. A. J. Muste, minister of Labor Temple in New York City; Mrs. Heilpern, a psychiatrist recently from Austria.

But Estes, too, is a place of grand fellowship--hikes, folk dancing, and social dancing. One makes good friends at Estes. Perhaps that is one reason that whoever goes there once, always wants to go back--and not for just the second time but for even the third or fourth.

But don't wait until you get to Estes to learn everything about it. Setse Poooc (try spelling it backwards) meets every other Sunday at Henley House. Come out and meet others who are going to Estes this year.

RELIGION
Marjorie Cook
Lloyd Estes

What is religion? A thing which is important to most of us regardless of how we believe; a thing for which men have fought and died in order to preserve.

Today in many countries our Christian religion is being discarded and a substitute is being put in its place. That we can still worship as we wish is one of the many things that we Americans have to be thankful for. We can get together and talk, sometimes argue, about our religion. We have the opportunity of listening to our country's religious leaders express their beliefs and convictions.

We may be surprised at some of the ideas set forth by them. To us they sound astonishing--far removed from many of the beliefs we hold. Yet in this reinterpretation of religion which is constantly going on, people are constantly trying to find a religion that is more of a practical application of Jesus' teachings, more of a work-a-day aid.

In our Reinterpretation of Religion Commission we hear new ideas and then in the following discussions we each try to develop our religion to its fullest.

And so this year at the University along with the mental and social sides of our personalities, let's develop the spiritual side, which is equally important.

CAMPUS COUSINS
Mary Ewers

It's nice to go away to school but not if you don't have friends awaiting you. In order that you may have friends when you arrive at the University for the first time, campus cousins were originated. Girls already at the University extend helping hands to you who are coming to K. U. After you arrive, call them up and let them help you get settled. They can see that you miss none of the opening events. Then next year you may be a campus cousin yourself.
